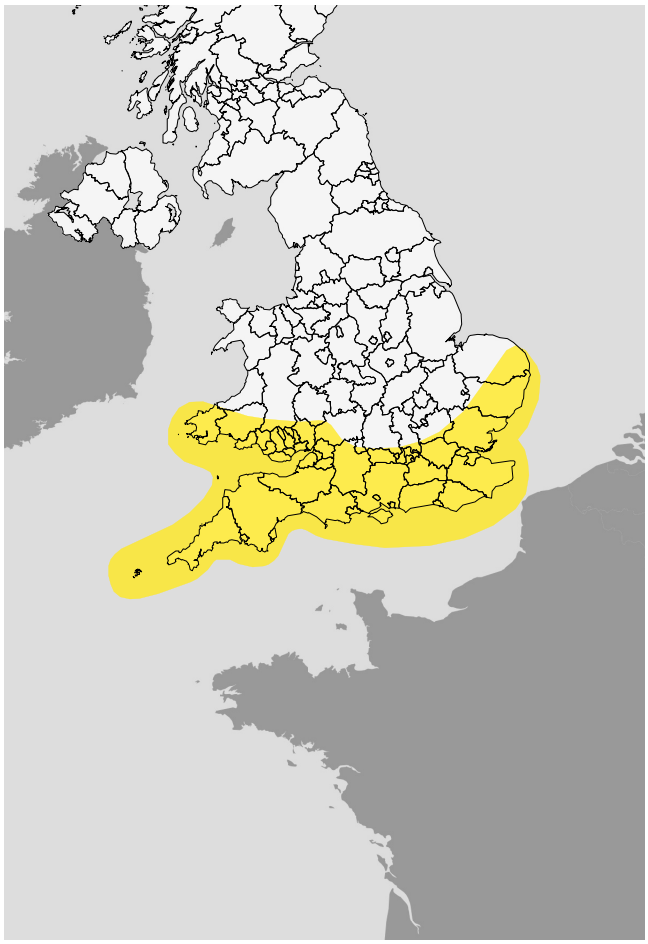
18:00 Thu 2 Nov 2023



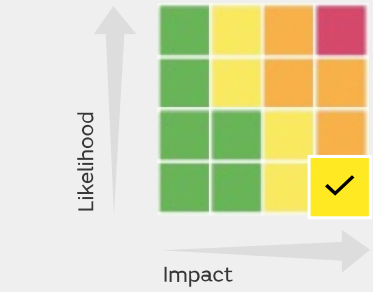
Very strong and potentially damaging winds associated with Storm Ciarán are possible on Thursday.

What to expect

- There is a slight chance that damage to buildings and homes could occur, with roofs blown off and power lines brought down
- There is a small chance that flying debris will result in a danger to life
- There is a small chance that injuries and danger to life could occur from large waves and beach material being thrown onto sea fronts, coastal roads and properties
- There is a small chance that roads, bridges and railway lines could close, with delays and cancellations to bus, train, ferry services and flights

Further details

Storm Ciaran is likely to bring a spell of very strong winds to southern parts of the UK, particularly during Thursday. Winds are likely to gust to 80mph along the south coast, with a very low risk of gusts in exposure to 90mph, and winds could gust up to 50 or 60mph inland from the early hours. The strongest winds will begin to ease later in the day from the southwest.



Very low likelihood of high impacts
